SUMMARY

Before COVID, I began planning a career shift towards something that would truly make me happy. However, the real journey started two years ago when I embarked on a self-directed study in Web Development, where I learned basics of front end such as, HTML, CSS, and Javascript over the course of a year. My dedication took a more structured turn when I enrolled in the Full Stack Developer Diploma Accelerator at Mission Ready.

At Mission Ready, we built various front end and back end web applications including websites, RESTful APIs, databases, CLI tools, and implemented DevOps CI/CD practices using Docker. I honed my skills using GitHub, working collaboratively with other students. We often worked in teams alongside designers for web design features. Which, not only encouraged but also strengthened our ability to thrive in a collaborative environment.

Beyond technical skills, my love for learning fuels my enjoyment of the tech world, where the relentless need for study and improvement—seen by some as discouraging—is for me a gift and opportunity that not only keeps me motivated but also ensures I approach everything I undertake with passion and commitment.
